1. The training courses for reserve officers of older age groups held in the spring of 1955 covered general military subjects. All officers who underwent this training were to sit for examinations in summer 1955.
2. Further training for these officers was to start in September 1955 when they were to be sent to special courses according to their branch of service.
3. During the training held in the spring the officers were instructed to spread information among the civilian population to the effect that both the Soviet Union and the Satellite countries are sufficiently equipped with modern weapons so that the civilians need not be afraid in the event of a Western attack against the Soviet Bloc. The officers were, however, forbidden to pass any detailed information about these weapons to the civilian population.
